Help Us Better Understand Liver Cancer

A Patient Study via Phone Discussion

Background

IQVIA, a global healthcare research firm, is looking for people with liver cancer to participate in a telephone research study. We want to hear from patients about their experience with primary liver cancer.

Purpose

We want to learn about your liver cancer symptoms. We are also interested in how these symptoms have impacted your daily life. This study will help the sponsor, a pharmaceutical company, understand what is most important for patients living with liver cancer.

Your Involvement

If you agree to be part of this study, IQVIA will schedule a 75 to 90-minute phone call. The discussion will be confidential, and your personal information will be protected. We will not contact you to buy anything. We will not ask you to take any medication before, during, or after the discussion. In return for your time and effort, IQVIA will send you a $150 gift card once the phone discussion is completed and your doctor has confirmed your liver cancer stage.

Next Steps

If you are interested in this study, please go to <https://bit.ly/2SJGqIE>. This link will take you to a questionnaire, which will help us determine if you qualify for the study. We will need your permission to include you in the study. You will need to give us permission to get information about your liver cancer from your doctor. We will also need permission to contact you to schedule the discussion. You can give us all these permissions directly on the same Link if you qualify.
